Adrienne Suter, Special Education

Year: 2013

E-Mail: ajs58@bu.edu

Here at Boston University's School of Education, I am involved with Student Government, and am currently serving as the Vice President of the History Educators' Club. I also spend a lot of time at the Catholic Center, which is where I first got involved in service activities on (and off) campus! During Summer 2011, I worked for Boston University Orientation, and during the school year I work as a tutor at a literacy program in Chelsea, MA. I love reading, traveling, seeing Boston in the fall and drinking pumpkin spice lattes.

Albert Paez, Social Studies Education with a Theater Performance Minor

Year: 2012

E-Mail: apaez@bu.edu

There are so many theatre opportunities here on campus, but one group I have become heavily involved in is Stage Troupe. Stage Troupe is BU's largest and oldest performance organization and performs four shows a semester, including many special projects. It is a great way to meet new people and continue your passion for theatre.

Alyssa Sarkis, Mathematics Education & Special Education

Year: 2014

E-Mail: asarkis@bu.edu

I was born in, raised in, and apparently, am never leaving Boston. I love everything about the city and all that Boston and Boston University has to offer. When I'm not obsessing over BU and Boston Bruins hockey, you can find me in the School of Education Student Government or BU Student Union meetings, the Catholic Center, or in the Education House. Some of my favorite moments from my first year at BU were from Transitional Mentor events, Dance Marathon, and Relay for Life.

Brett Feldman, Social Studies Education

Year: 2013

E-Mail: bmf90@bu.edu

I am a proud member of Sigma Alpha Mu Fraternity, where I serve as Alumni Relations Chairman. I am also deeply involved with the Inter-Fraternity Council as the Vice-President of Judicial Affairs. I love the sense of community and brotherhood that going Greek builds. Beyond Greek life, I am a writing tutor in the BU Writing Center. I love getting to help students one-on-one to improve their writing skills.

Brett Weinstein, Elementary Education

Year: 2013

E-Mail: brettw1@bu.edu

I'm a pretty laid back guy, sometimes I just like hanging out with friends at my apartment or playing video games. I also love to go out and eat at all of the great restaurants in Boston; U Burger is a personal favorite. I'm also involved in SED intramurals; I love volleyball the most and I'm captain of the team this year. Additionally, I am a work study in the Office of Student Services, learning about how higher education works, and helping students.

Featuring Professor Douglas Zook

Date:

Wednesday, December 4, 2013

Time:

4:30 – 6:00 PM

Location:

Room 423, BU School of Education, 2 Silber Way Boston, MA

Preparing teachers in all disciplines and their students such that they have a viable future and for generations to come -- the very core of sustainable thinking -- is arguably an overarching priority, given the environmental and climate change reality. This overview presentation examines the threat context, presents a sampler of healthy actions underway here and globally, and poses the ethical challenge to schools of education and ourselves.

Boston University School of Education Blog

The SED Blog was designed and managed by Andrew J. Barlow. It is meant to have a personal touch in a professional setting.

The blog serves as a communication forum for the SED community to discuss current educational issues and topics. Entries are written by alumni, students, and the Dean. Additionally, readers can comment on entries to join the conversation.

The Banner was designed to be a fun, welcoming image to introduce readers to the blog. It was drawn in Adobe Photoshop.

The illustrations were inspired by two student entries, and drawn to specifically accompany the entries. The artwork was created in Adobe Illustrator.

Real Life Friends Podcast - Poster

The Real Life Friends Podcast Poster was designed for the Youtube user Al Chestbreach. It is meant to promote his internet podcast - Real Life Friends - featuring three other hosts. The podcast discusses film & tv, video games, comic books, pop culture, and their own personal lives.

The audience is internet users, ages 14 to 32 - mainly male.

Do you know what your kids are streaming?

REAL LIFE FRIENDS

From the mind that brought you those bad-ass, hilarious gamer and cat videos comes a all new podcast. Well it's kind of a podcast, but it's on YouTube or you can download it. Anyway... Al Chestbreach presents REAL LIFE FRIENDS featuring Al, himself, along with Matt, Sychiboy, and Nicholi.

Hear the boys chat about their real lives, comics, video games, movies, and comedy. Let's be honest - what else are you going to do on a Friday night?

Boston University School of Education: Pinning and Affirmation Ceremony - Program

The Pinning & Affirmation Ceremony is a celebration honoring undergraduate juniors who will be beginning their student practicum in the following semester.

The audience attending the event includes the students, faculty and staff, alumni, and families.

The Educator's Affirmation:

I dedicate myself to the life of an educator, to laying the living foundations upon which successor generations must continue to build their lives.

I dedicate myself to the advancement of learning, for I know that without it our successors will lack both the vision and the power to build well.

I dedicate myself to the cultivation of character, for I know that humanity cannot flourish without courage, compassion, honesty, and trust.

I commit myself to the advancement of my own learning and to the cultivation of my own character, for I know that I must bear witness in my own life to the ideals that I have dedicated myself to promote in others.

In the presence of this gathering, I so dedicate and commit myself.

RECEPTION:

Please join us outside the auditorium for a light reception immediately following the ceremony.

SPEAKER BIOGRAPHIES:

Adam Gray

A native of Somerville, Massachusetts, Adam Gray currently holds the title of 2012 Massachusetts Teacher of the Year. This honor secures Adam a place in the running for the 2012 National Teacher of the Year.

Adam is a new member of the staff at Boston Latin School, one of the best public high schools in Boston. Before teaching at Boston Latin School, Adam taught tenth-grade math at Monument High School in South Boston, the first secondary school in New England with a curriculum focused on public safety and criminal justice. While a teacher at Monument High School, he founded their chapter of the Mu Alpha Theta math honor society, on the idea that helping students to enjoy math would improve their performance in the subject. Today, almost 10-percent of the school's students participate in the group.

Hannah Faigenbaum

Hannah is a junior in the School of Education from Huntington, New York, studying Elementary and Special Education. She became interested in special education after performing in a play written by students with physical disabilities.

A leader among her peers, Hannah serves as a part of the Transitional Mentor Program and as Vice President of Project Heal BU - a club that promotes positive body image and raises money for girls who cannot afford treatment for eating disorders. Hannah also volunteers at the William Monroe Trotter Elementary School and works as a substitute teacher at Temple Sinai's Hebrew School in Brookline.
