COMSA

The College of Communication Student Assembly (COMSA) is the COM-specific student government and our sole purpose is to lead and assist all students within the college. We fund all of our organization's programs as well as plan and organize large events such as festivals and town halls in addition to aiding other COM student groups. We also supply our students with ongoing professional opportunities throughout the year. We strive to further better our COM community and unite all COM programs and organizations every day. Side Note: Two positions on our executive board are currently open. Contact an officer for info!

THE DAILY FREE PRESS

The Daily Free Press, Boston University's independent student newspaper, is BU's go-to spot for news, culture and sports. Working for The FreeP is an invaluable experience for any student looking to build a professional portfolio. At the FreeP, you'll have the opportunity to see your work published and to prove to future employers that you have what it takes. Staff members cover a variety of city and campus events, from elections to protests to sporting events to concerts. Past staffers have attended U.S. President Barack Obama's visit to Boston, sat in the TD Garden press box and met famous musicians touring in our city.

THE TAB

The Tab is America's leading college news network. You might have heard of us after we broke the story about Malia Obama going to Harvard and when we asked Donald Trump what he is going to do for people leaving college. We have a grassroots network of the most talented student reporters at over 70 colleges in the US, and a global audience of five million readers. Here at BU, we report on everything BU, including news, editorials, and features written by dozens of talent writers. We were the first to report on the Neo-Nazi posters found across campus and have showed up to every possible fire on campus last academic year.

PRLAB

PRLab is a great place for students to gain real-life public relations experience as they push their own limits in a unique, practical learning environment. Students have the freedom to create innovative and engaging experiences for real clients. This is a great resume builder for students during the school year and a wonderful way to meet new people.

BU FILM SOCIETY

If you're a movie lover then BUFS is the club for you! We hold weekly screenings and discussions of classic movies with no commitment - if you see we're watching a movie you want to see, come and join us; if not, that's fine too! We also love sending out free passes to preview screenings of upcoming movies if that interests you (and why wouldn't it?).
