Making the most of multimedia options to be focus of fall workshop

Expert advice on how scholastic journalists can make the most of multi-media options will be the focus of this year's fall workshop Monday, Oct. 23 from 10-noon.

Experienced professional to give presentation

Michelle Johnson, an associate professor of the practice, multimedia/online journalism at Boston University, will give the keynote presentation.

She has extensive experience in writing, editing and production for both print and online media.

A former editor for the Boston Globe, she was on the team that launched boston.com.

Before moving into online media she was an editor for the Metro, National, Foreign and Business sections of the newspaper.

After her work launching boston.com, she wrote a personal technology column.

Now, in addition to teaching full time at the College of Communication, Johnson oversees the award-winning Boston University News Service.

In 2015, Johnson was chosen to be among the first cohort of professional journalists and journalism educators who have been certified to train journalists in how to use Google tools. The program is a collaboration among Poynter Institute, Google and the Society of Professional Journalists.

For more than 15 years she has taught numerous multimedia workshops for professional journalists as well as student training programs.

Panelists to discuss scholastic experiences

Following Johnson's presentation there will be a discussion with panelists from this year's All New England Award winners in the online and print/online categories.

Advisers and editors will describe challenges that technological changes have presented in terms of scheduling, coverage and communication, and how their staffs work together to meet them.

There will also be time to raise and discuss questions of special concern.

Staffs and advisers from all student media are welcome to attend the workshop. Tuition is $25 per person. The deadline for registration is Friday, Oct. 13.

Mission of NESPA

The New England Scholastic Press Association aims to foster excellence in scholastic journalism.

This Association encourages high standards in student journalism, supports the interests of students and teachers in the student press in the New England states, and fosters a closer relationship among students and advisers interested and engaged in student journalism.

How to enter 2017 Localizing Contest

When you show how issues that affect people in your state, your country or around the world also affect people in your own school community, that's localizing.

To enter the contest, please send the broadcast or published work with the entry form and fee.

Each entry must have been broadcast or published between May 5 and December 31, 2017.

For print media please send complete page, unmounted tear sheet on which entry appears.

Yearbooks please send either a PDF or photocopy of the page(s) from your 2017 book.

Tape a filled out copy of the entry form to the upper right corner of the back of EACH entry.

Broadcasts please send DVD.

Put the web link to each online entry on the entry form.

Entry fee: NONE for members of NESPA; $3 per entry for non-members.

Send entries to New England Scholastic Press Association, Helen F. Smith, executive director, Boston University, College of Communication, 640 Commonwealth Ave., Boston, Mass. 02215. The deadline is Friday, Jan. 12, 2018.

See page 3 for entry form and page 4 for an updated list of 200 suggested topics to localize.

Site visits available to members

Free site visits for members are among the services the New England Scholastic Press Association provides.

Topics of site visits have included

- advertising sales and managing the business side
- critiques of current publications

- design and redesign techniques
- news and feature coverage and writing

- ways to present student opinion
- copyediting and proofreading
- sports coverage and writing
- starting a new publication.

Focal points for site visits are up to individual staffs and advisers.

The service is free to members in good standing as of May 5, 2017 and to those who join this fall.

To arrange for a site visit, call 617-353-3478 or email the NESPA's executive director, Helen F. Smith helenfs@bu.edu or phsmith@igc.org.

Staffs, advisers can nominate professionals for awards

Staffs and advisers can nominate individuals who contribute significantly to New England's scholastic press for special awards.

The Robert Baram Award honors distinguished advisers from this region who have helped students raise their sights and standards in the practice of school journalism.

The award is named for the late Robert Baram, founder and for 46 years NESPA's executive director.

Consideration for the award is based on an adviser's

- contributions to the cause of ethical, thorough and articulate scholastic journalism in the adviser's school and community; and

- support for school journalists in all facets of their efforts to present credible and useful material to their audience.

The Freedom to Write Award honors school administrators who actively inspire students and faculty to use journalism as a way to participate more fully in a democratic society.

Awards of Special Recognition honor professors and members of the professional press.

Please send nomination materials to Helen F. Smith, executive director, New England Scholastic Press Association, College of Communication, Boston University, 640 Commonwealth Ave., Boston, Mass. 02215 by Friday, Jan. 12, 2018.

Winners receive their awards at the annual conference in May, 2018.
