Decoupling from China? Managing reputational and compliance risks in global supply chains

Wednesday 16 June 2021

13:00-14:00 BST

The disruption to international trade and the global economy caused by COVID-19, coupled with the imposition of trade restrictions and tariffs as a result of US-Chinese geopolitical tensions, are forcing many companies to reassess the merits of their finely-tuned global supply chains, often built up over decades. More than ever before, businesses that rely on fast production and rapid delivery of goods need to forearm themselves against unforeseen events, respond to rapidly changing international circumstances, remain compliant with changing laws and protect their reputation among consumers.

Our upcoming webinar will discuss the emerging compliance and reputational challenges facing companies as they seek to adjust their supply chains to a changing geopolitical and technological landscape.
